CoP objectives:

- Address capacity needs and gaps in the energy sector with a gender-transformative approach, ensuring active and meaningful participation of women in decision-making processes.
- Collaborate with a wide range of actors at national, regional and international levels to strengthen capacities for a gender-just energy transition.
- Promote knowledge sharing and collective learning across the Global South to influence energy and climate policy through peer-to-peer exchanges, enhanced by an open-access platform and a global dialogue strategy to influence energy and climate policy.

CoP characteristics:

- Composed of organizations from five main target groups (Universities, NGOs, Enterprise Support Organizations, Sectoral Associations, and Regional and International Organizations) from Bolivia, Cameroon, Côte d'Ivoire, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Guatemala, Madagascar, Uganda, Zambia, which each play a critical role in capacity building for a just energy transition.
- Guided by peer learning across regions with a focus on aligning with policy priorities.
- Inclusive design and implementation, ensuring active involvement of women in all stages.
- Integrated virtual open-access platform to support South-South knowledge sharing and capacity building.
- Incorporates a Train of Trainers (ToT) course, designed collaboratively with stakeholder groups and energy and gender experts.

CoP benefits:

- Participation in a global dialogue strategy to influence national and international policy on energy transition.
- Chance to take part in the Train of the Trainers (ToT) program, with content tailored to specific stakeholder needs and a focus on gender transformation.
- Elegibility to apply for small grants and awards to support capacity building initiatives and innovative trainee-led solutions.
- Opportunity to network and collaborate with key stakeholders across the Global South.
- Access to a open-access platform, increasing the reach and impact of capacity building efforts.
